

Willett Builders, Inc. Nearing Completion on Capital Outlay Project for Randolph Central School District

BUFFALO, NY— Willett Builders, Inc., a full service construction firm comprised of contracting, construction management, and fabrication divisions is pleased to announce the capital outlay project for the Randolph Central School District, is nearing completion.

The scope of work involved masonry restoration of the historical building exterior, as well as cleaning & repointing, plus new precast concrete and roofing modifications.

WBI has extensive experience in the public sector, involving many capital outlay and improvement projects, including Sweet Home Central District, Albion Central School District, and the Forestville Central School District, among others.

“Completing the work for the Randolph Central School District will add another large scale, central school district project to our portfolio,” said Willett Builders, Inc., owner Ryan Willett. “Working with the Randolph Central School District has been a pleasure, and knowing that our firm has been involved with such beautiful facilities is a great point of pride.”
